

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

ĀN JǐNGFŪ is a lecturer at the Beijing Film Academy. He received his master of arts degree in film studies from the Beijing Film Academy in 1988, and has served as assistant director for several prize-winning Chinese films. He was a visiting instructor in the Department of Film and Video, Columbia College, during the 1992–93 academic year.

DUDLEY ANDREW is Angelo Bertocci Professor of Critical Studies and the Director of the Institute for Cinema and Culture at the University of Iowa. He is the author of, among other books, Film in the Aura of Art and (with his brother Paul Andrew) Kenji Mizoguchi: A Guide to References and Resources.

CHRIS BERRY teaches Cinema Studies at La Trobe University in Melbourne, Australia. He has worked in the Chinese film industry and edited Perspectives on Chinese Cinema (1991). His articles on Chinese cinema have appeared in Cinema Journal, Camera Obscura, Jump Cut, East-West Film Journal, Cinemaya, and Continuum, among others.

CYNTHIA CONTRERAS, Assistant Professor in the Film Department of Brooklyn College, CUNY, has lectured and written on the works of Kurosawa, Kobayashi, and Shinoda.

D. WILLIAM DAVIS completed his doctorate in film studies from the University of Wisconsin, writing a dissertation on prewar Japanese cinema. He also served as Curator of Film and Video at the Honolulu Academy of Arts.

DAVID DESSER is Professor of Cinema Studies and Speech Communication at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. He is the author of The Samurai Films of Akira Kurosawa (1983) and Eros plus Massacre: An Introduction to the Japanese New Wave Cinema (1988).

LINDA C. EHRLICH is Assistant Professor of Japanese and Cinema at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. Her articles on Asian cinema have appeared in East-West Film Journal, Cinemaya, Japan Forum, and Journal of Film and Video, among others. She has conducted workshops and lectures at the Cleveland Museum of Art and the University Art Museum, Berkeley, on this topic of the relationship between the visual arts and cinema.

MARY ANN FARQUHAR teaches Chinese literature, film, and language in the Division of Asian and International Studies at Griffith University in Queensland, Australia. Her particular interests are in Chinese popular culture, and she has written a history of children's literature in China.

KATHE GEIST received her Ph.D. in art history from the University of Michigan and has taught at Illinois State University and Koryo International College near Nagoya, Japan. Her articles on Japanese cinema have appeared in Art Journal, East-West Film Journal, Film Quarterly, and Image Forum (Tokyo), and she is author of The Cinema of Wim Wenders: From Paris, France, to "Paris, Texas" (1988).

HÀO DÀZHÈNG is an architect and Associate Professor of Film Theory, China Film Art Research Center, Beijing. Professor Hao translated Dudley Andrew's Concepts in Film Theory into Chinese. He now resides in Germany.

JENNY KWOK WAH LAU is Assistant Professor of Film at Ohio University. She has published articles on Chinese cinema in Wide Angle and Film Quarterly, as well as in Hong Kong journals.

SHERMAN E. LEE is the retired director of the Cleveland Museum of Art and currently Adjunct Professor of Art at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and Duke University. He is author of numerous books on Asian art, including Eight Dynasties of Chinese Painting (with W. K. Ho, L. Sideman, and M. Wilson, 1980) and Reflections of Reality in Japanese Art (1983).

NÍ ZHÈN, Associate Professor and Director of the theory research section of the Beijing Film Academy, has written extensively on realism in the Chinese cinema and on film theory. A noted screenwriter, his work was seen recently in Zhāng Yímóu's Raise the Red Lantern.

DONALD RICHIE is the award-winning author of many books on the Japanese cinema, including major studies of Kurosawa and Ozu.

THOMAS RIMER is Professor of Japanese Literature and Chair of the Department of East Asian Languages and Literatures at the University of Pittsburgh. He is the author and translator of a variety of books on Japanese literature, art, and culture, including Pilgrimages: Aspects of Japanese Literature and Culture (1988).

ANN SHERIF teaches Japanese literature and language at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio. Her translations have appeared in New Japanese Voices: The Best Contemporary Fiction from Japan and N.P. by Banana Yoshimoto.

SATŌ TADAO is a film critic and historian, and editor of the journal Eigashi kenkyū. A collection of his essays has been published in English under the title Currents in Japanese Cinema.

DOUGLAS WILKERSON received his Ph.D. from the Department of East Asian Languages and Literatures at Yale University, and teaches Chinese language and literature at The University of Tennessee at Knoxville.